Keynote Speakers

Know Your Population: Translating Health Between Cultures
Lara S. Poole, Maj, USAF, BSC, MPH
United States Air Force

Major Lara Poole currently serves as the Chief of Community Health Programs at the Air Force Medical Agency at Defense Health Headquarters in Virginia. She directs public health policy for 505,000 total force personnel across 82 Air Force installations.

Major Poole is a double Gator having earned her B.S. in Microbiology in 2013 followed by her MPH in 2014. Major Poole joined the United States Air Force in 2016 where she has since served in multiple positions across the Air Force Medical Service directing preventative health operations within the bomber, pilot training, District of Washington, and deployed populations.

Global Environmental Determinants of One Health: A Fireside Chat
Oladele A. Ogunseitan, PhD
University of California, Irvine

Oladele (Dele) Ogunseitan holds the titles of Distinguished Professor and University of California Presidential Chair at UC Irvine, where he led the establishment of the Program in Public Health and served as founding Chair of the Department of Population Health & Disease Prevention. He is co-director of the World Institute for Sustainable Development of Materials (WISDOM), and co-chair of Apple’s Green Chemistry Advisory Board. He served on the State of California’s Green Ribbon Science Panel, and the State’s Advisory Committee on Community Protection and Hazardous Waste Reduction Initiative.

Both talks held in HPNP Auditorium